Microsoft 365 Copilot at Work

Making Copilot work for you.

Scott Hay · Microsoft Certified Trainer · AIA Copilot

SESSION B · 60 MINUTES

Copilot in Teams & Outlook

Run the inbox. Sound like yourself. Own the meeting.

SESSION B · THE SCENARIO

The inbox after launch week

Campaign MERIDIAN's console week is over. Your inbox kept going without you.

140 unread - one thread is 32 messages deep

Tenant kickoff at 3:00 - you haven't prepped

45 minutes - to dig out and show up ready

SESSION B · THIS HOUR

Your inbox: the highest-leverage hour

Copilot in Teams - use it harder

Meeting recap

You know this one. The unlock: ASK it things - don't just read the summary.

During the meeting

With transcription on: 'What did I miss?' 'What was decided so far?' - mid-meeting.

Chats & channels

Catch up on a busy thread: decisions first, then who owes what.

Rollout is moving fast here - if a surface hasn't reached you yet, the same prompts work the day it does.

Paste these into Teams Copilot

Recap, interrogated

- Ask the meeting, don't skim it
- Owners and deadlines - always
- Surface the unanswered questions
- Feed the follow-up email

PASTE THIS

What was decided in this meeting, and who owns each action item - with deadlines?

What questions were raised that nobody answered?

Draft a follow-up email from this meeting: decisions, actions with owners, open items.

What Outlook Copilot does here

Three verbs cover the inbox.

Summarize

'Summary by Copilot' collapses a 32-message thread to the decisions and asks.

Draft

Describe the reply you need - tone, points, length - and edit from 80%.

Coach

Copilot reviews YOUR draft for tone and clarity before you send.

Same three verbs in Outlook desktop, web and mobile.

Ask at the depth you need

The skim

'Summarize this thread in 5 bullets.' Orientation in ten seconds.

The decisions

'What was decided, and what is still open?' The state of play.

The commitments

'Who owes what, by when? Table: person, item, deadline.' The safety net.

Name the output shape you want - bullets, a table, one paragraph. Copilot obliges.

Triage a 32-message thread

LIVE DEMO

- 1 Open the 'Pad B schedule conflict' thread
- 2 Skim - then decisions - then commitments table
- 3 Draft with Copilot: reply with 3 commitments
- 4 Coaching pass on the draft, then humanize

Draft from intent - the three dials

Tone

'Warm but firm.' 'Neutral and factual.' 'Apologetic, once.'

The asks

Name what the reply must do: confirm X, commit to Y, ask Z.

Length

'Under 150 words.' Respect for the reader, discipline for the draft.

Grounded replies - attach the source

The question comes in

Skyward asks: 'what's the recycle fee if we scrub inside the window?'

Attach the agreement

In Chat: attach the tenant use agreement, ask for the answer with the clause.

Reply with receipts

'$22,000 per recycle, Section 2' - paste into the reply. Confident, cited, done.

Coaching - the pre-send second opinion

What it checks

Tone, clarity, and how the reader is likely to receive it.

When to use it

Hard news, executive asks, first contact, anything you'd re-read twice.

What it isn't

A rewrite. It suggests; you decide. Your name is at the bottom.

Paste these - the inbox set

What you're practicing

- Summarize at three depths
- Confirm, commit, ask
- Attach the source for facts
- Coach the risky ten percent

Who owes what, by when, in this thread?
Table: person, item, deadline.

Draft a reply confirming [X], committing to [Y] by [date], and asking who owns [Z].
Professional, under 150 words.

Using the attached [agreement/policy], answer this question and cite the section: [question]

Copilot drafts it - or you do?

Let Copilot draft

- Routine replies and confirmations
- Summaries and recaps
- First pass at hard news

Write it yourself

- Personnel and sensitive matters
- Commitments you haven't verified
- Anything classified or regulated

Copilot never sends - you send. The name at the bottom is yours.

SESSION B · PERSONALIZATION

Copilot, in your voice

Generic drafts get edited to death. Your voice, captured once, fixes that.

Analyze your writing - Copilot studies 10 emails you actually sent

Capture the style - tone, rhythm, sign-offs - plus a never list

Draft as you - every new email starts 90% yours, not 80% generic

Capture your voice - once

01

Collect

~10 sent emails,
your best.

02

Analyze

Chat:
'describe my style.'

03

Refine

Correct it once.

04

Save

To a Page:
'My voice.'

05

Reuse

Paste into any draft.

A voice profile worth keeping

Tone & rhythm

'Direct, warm. Short sentences. One idea per paragraph.'

Habits & structure

'Opens with the ask. Bullets for 3+. Deadline in bold.'

Signature moves

'Greet by first name. Signs off Thanks much.'

The never list

'No leverage, no delve, no I-hope-this-finds-you-well.'

Your voice, captured - live

LIVE DEMO

- 1 Attach 8 of my sent emails in Chat
- 2 'Analyze my style - build a reusable profile'
- 3 Refine one line, save it to a Page
- 4 Draft the same reply with and without it

Paste these - build your voice

Tonight, 15 minutes

- 10 sent emails you're proud of
- Mixed types - commit, decline, update
- Refine the profile once
- Save to a Page named 'My voice'

These are emails I wrote. Analyze my style into a reusable guide: tone, rhythm, structure, greetings and sign-offs - PLUS a never list of buzzwords and AI phrases I don't use. Be specific.

Using this style guide: [paste profile] - draft [the email you need]. Keep all facts; the voice is non-negotiable and nothing from the never list.

Keep your voice profile alive

One home

The Page named 'My voice' - Library, one click, always current.

Refresh quarterly

Your voice drifts; re-run the analysis each quarter.

One per audience

Optional: 'My voice - leadership' vs 'My voice - customers.'

SESSION B · MEETINGS

Meetings are won before they start

Around the meeting - the workflow

01

Prep

Chat + attached docs → a one-page prep brief.

02

Agenda

Turn the brief into a timed agenda email.

03

Run it

Your notes - Session D turns them into actions.

04

Follow up

Outlook drafts the recap and asks.

The prep brief - four boxes

Their side

Obligations and opens from THEIR paper - the agreement, their emails.

Our side

Our commitments and status - the campaign report.

Three questions

What you'll ask when the conversation stalls or slides.

A brief you can read in 60 seconds beats a dossier you never open.

Walk into the 3:00 prepared

LIVE DEMO

- 1 Chat: attach tenant agreement + ops status
- 2 Prompt the one-page prep brief
- 3 Turn it into a timed agenda
- 4 Outlook: draft the agenda email to attendees

Paste these - meetings

What you're practicing

- Prep brief from the documents
- Agenda with time boxes
- Follow-up before you forget
- Voice profile on the send

Using the attached docs, build a one-page prep brief for my meeting with [who]: their obligations, our commitments, open items, 3 questions to ask.

Turn this brief into a [45]-minute agenda with time boxes; open items first.

Draft a follow-up email from these meeting notes: decisions, action items with owners, next meeting date. Brief and friendly.

Reply patterns that never fail

Confirm, commit, ask

Every reply does three jobs. If it does none, don't send it.

Answer every question

'Reply addressing each question asked, one per paragraph.' Nothing dodged.

The escalation summary

'Summarize this thread for my director: one paragraph, neutral tone.'

The graceful delay

'Acknowledge, give a realistic date, offer an interim update.'

Your inbox week

Three lines to keep

Summarize at the depth
you need.

Your voice is a prompt away - capture it.

Prep and follow-up beat recap.

Questions - then capture your voice

Tonight, 15 minutes

Copy 10 sent emails you're proud of, run the voice-profile prompt from the packet, save the result to a Page named 'My voice.'

Coming up

Tomorrow 10:00 - Session C: Copilot in PowerPoint & Word. The launch readiness brief, drafted.
